

CJD Jugendorf-Christophorusschule Königswinter

Between the Rhine river and the Petersberg, at the foot of the oldest German forest preserve, the "Siebengebirge" (The Seven Hills), the Jugendorf-Christophorus School lies on the northern outskirts of Königswinter. Nestled in this enticing landscape, the school building is surrounded by an athletics field, a modern gymnasium and an indoor swimming pool. The school has a large auditorium for curricular and extra-curricular activities.

The Jugendorf-Christophorus School, extended in 2000 with the addition of a boarding house, is a modern educational institution that incorporates Christian ideals into its pedagogical concepts. The school is actually two schools in one: the middle school prepares students for vocational training, while the college preparatory school qualifies students for college and university. The close cooperation between these two school types is complemented by an integrative program for exceptionally gifted children.
